RUHR VALLEY IS TARGET OF R.A.F. ATTACK

Vital Industrial Cities Are Pounded By Bombers During Night

LONDON, Feb. 15.—(BUP)—British planes, in an attack on Germany's vital industrial Ruhr Valley during the night, bombed Gelsenkirchen, Dusseldorf, and Ruhrort, the air ministry said in a communique today.

At Gelsenkirchen the British planes bombed oil installations, the ministry said.

At Dusseldorf and adjoining Ruhrort, the British bombers attacked various targets in the inland port of the Rhine at the mouth of the Ruhr.

Both British and German planes crashed over the Kent coast as a result of the attack.

German planes had given London its severest raid in a month during the night, and this afternoon attempt to carry out a mass daylight raid on Great Britain but were beaten off by Spitfires and Hurricane fighters plane.

Strong formation of German bombers crashed over the Kent coast as a result of the attack.

As the Nazi planes flew inland toward the British fighter planes encountered them.

Active Participation In Nazis' New Order Is Believed Probable

LONDON, Feb. 15.—(BUP)—Premier Bogdan Filov, it was reported in reliable quarters today, has advised Great Britain that he is unable to give assurances that Bulgaria will not facilitate German troops movements in the Balkans.

Belgrade, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Yugoslavia's premier and foreign minister arrived at noon today from Germany, where they held a three-hour conference with Hitler yesterday, and went immediately to report to Prince Paul.

Both Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Aleksandar Cincar-Markovic refused a statement, but sources close to the premier earlier had indicated Yugoslavia probably would adopt a course more in accord with German wishes.

From the station the two statesmen drove directly to the palace where they lunched with Prince Paul.

The regency council, an important aid, will meet in a few days to discuss these terms and formulate Yugoslavia's answer. The exact content of the terms is not known.

A communique giving the nature of the terms was not known.

'PEACE TERMS' BEING SOUGHT IN U.S. SENATE

Opposition to Measure For British Aid Seeks New Amendment

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Senate opponents of the United States administration's British aid bill were reported today to be drafting an amendment which would require Britain to state her "peace terms" before receiving any assistance from the United States under the proposed lend-lease program.

Numerous technical difficulties were involved in writing the provision, and even some oppositionists said that it might prove unworkable.

Win the one to require a statement Monday—the Senate was in recess today—Chairman Walter George (Dem., Georgia) of the foreign relations committee told reporters the committee would not offer any amendments to the bill in addition to those it made earlier this week, before recommending the legislation for passage.

But George said, this would not preclude the offering of amendments on the floor if the need for alterations became apparent in the course of debate.

Administration chiefs estimated their opponents would not be able to muster more than 20 to 25 votes when the final roll is called. The opposition on the other hand claimed the sure support of 30 senators.

While House leaders said enactment of the legislation would be followed by one by a formal request for appropriations and contract authority to put the program into operation.

Opposition amendments in addition to the one to require a statement on Britain's peace terms included:

1.—A proposal prohibiting the president from transferring any portion of the U.S. navy to a foreign power.

2.—A prohibition against the use of U.S. vessels to escort merchant convoys.

3.—A provision stating that "defense articles" transferred to foreign countries would not involve the United States in any foreign war.

Speaks Sunday

BY HON. ERNEST BEVIN, Minister of Labor and National Service in the British government, who will speak over a CBC national network on Sunday at 11 a.m. Edmonton time, on behalf of the Canadian War Savings Campaign. The talk is sponsored by the Canadian Publishers War Finance Publicity Committee.

ERNEST BEVIN TO BROADCAST TO DOMINION

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—(CP)—Rt. Hon. Ernest Bevin, British minister of labor and national service, will speak over a CBC national network on Sunday at 11 a.m. EDT, (11 a.m. M.S.T.), the Canadian Publishers War Finance Publicity Committee announced Friday.

The speech will be heard over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. It will be broadcast over a British Columbia network at 11:35 p.m. PST, (11:35 p.m. M.S.T.) Sunday afternoon.

Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born editor of the London Times, will be the first to speak to Canadians on Sunday, Feb. 15.

L. W. Brockington, K.C., special wartime assistant to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, will follow both Mr. Bevin and Lord Beaverbrook with a 15-minute commentary.

Mr. Bevin, who entered politics for the first time nine months ago at the age of 35, is generally regarded in Britain as Prime Minister Winston Churchill's "right-hand man" and is considered the most powerful man in the government.

If the question of succession arose, the war finance publicity committee said, Sunday's broadcast will be his first talk addressed directly to Canadians.

A drive by British troops into Ethiopia in the Blue Nile region also was reported. The committee said that units of the Sudanese had occupied Ethiopian territory and had captured the town of Addis Ababa.

Italian reinforcements were reported in the Cheren area of Ethiopia where the British are fighting a campaign to capture the capital of Addis Ababa.

"Our pressure is increasing," the committee said, while the British command striking southward into the Red Sea and is making satisfactory progress.

Important Base Is Taken In Offensive By South Africans

British Column Now On Red Sea Within 250 Miles Of Somaliland Capital—Opens Up Possibility Of New Drive

CAIRO, Feb. 15.—(BUP)—The British middle east command reported today that South African troops in a slashing offensive into Italian Somaliland have occupied the important port of Chisimayo, second largest in the colony.

The manoeuvre placed the British column on the Indian Ocean, 250 miles south of the capital of Italian Somaliland, Mogadishu, with which it is linked by a good coastal road.

At the same time British forces on the Libyan, Ethiopian and Eritrean fronts enabled against weakening Italian resistance.

The capture of Chisimayo opened up the possibility of a British drive up the coast which, if successful, would place all Italian Somaliland in British hands and enable the Imperial forces to re-occupy British Somaliland which was evacuated by the British last fall.

The middle east command reported that South African troops had captured guns, armored vehicles and prisoners at Chisimayo. "In Chisimayo harbor," the communique said, "one ship was found scuttled and three others damaged and still floating. The oil storage tanks had been set afire."

The communique did not indicate whether the tanks were fired by the Italians or caught fire as a result of the British bombardment.

The south African Air Force, which is operating in the area, reported that it had bombed Italian positions in the area of Chisimayo, and had captured an Italian soldier in an 180 mile drive from Kenya.

These points are close to the coast of the Red Sea and are within 250 miles of the Italian port of Chisimayo. The middle east command said.

A drive by British troops into Ethiopia in the Blue Nile region also was reported. The committee said that units of the Sudanese had occupied Ethiopian territory and had captured the town of Addis Ababa.

Today's War Moves

LONDON's official confirmation that British parachute troops have been operating in southern Italy has special significance because of the implication that some of the men had returned to their "base." While the wording of the British communique was obscure, probably intentionally, the natural use of "base" in its military sense means starting point or some place of security for recuperation.

It is the actual meaning, in the present instance, then it would seem that the British have found some secret means of reaching parachute troops after they have done their work in enemy territory. That is to say, parachute can no longer be described as "suicide troops" or as men marked inevitably for capture if they are not killed while engaged in their hazardous task.

Italians have announced the capture of several parachutists and the British say "some" did not return to their base. Thus, the rescue device seems to have operated imperfectly, but that it should have worked is the whole point.

Italian Rail Service Suspended At Points Parachutists Landed

ROME, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Freight traffic along several railway lines in southern Italy where British parachutists landed has been suspended, it was learned today.

Italian authorities had said that the British troops, who fled from the sky with loads of machine guns and hand grenades and explosives for demolition on the night of Feb. 10-11, had communications and waterworks as their sabotage objects.

It was officially announced today that Blackshirt militiamen in the zone southeast of Naples took part in the attempt to round up the invaders.

Acceptance of freight was suspended on lines connecting Brindisi, Bari, Taranto, Foggia and Lecce, as well as at all stations in Naples because of the present transportation situation and fear of "difficulties," the communications ministry announced.

Military sources said that as the troops were uniformed, those captured will be treated as prisoners of war.

Police were reported to be continuing their investigation of the incident, which began Jan. 22 when Col. Donovan, an ex-actress, announced loss of his passport as he was about to leave for Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

GREAT BRITAIN REJECTS HOOVER FOOD PROPOSAL

LONDON, Feb. 15.—(CP)—Herbert Hoover's offer to have Britain sell her surplus wheat to Europe in order that food may be sent from the United States to German-occupied countries will be firmly rejected, authorized sources said today.

It is understood the former United States president is acting at Chicago Sunday night in an effort to secure such a lowering of the price, but sources here said "This is too late, and a blockade will not permit exceptions."

It is pointed out if Germany were able to bring in food for the country under her belt it would mean a complete collapse in agriculture could be diverted to such tasks as munitions making.

In the British quarter it was suggested such humanitarian activities might be directed to countries such as China and Spain, where it is known that millions are undernourished.

GREAT CANUCK RAILWAY IS 60 YEARS OF AGE

Canadian Pacific World's Greatest Travel
System

MONTREAL, Feb. 15.—The Canadian Pacific Railway company, the world's largest privately owned transportation system, is 60 years of age today and can look back on six eventful decades during which it has contributed much to the growth of the Dominion of Canada as a great among the foremost nations of the world. The Act granting a charter to the company to build the transcontinental line passed in the House of Commons on Feb. 15, 1881, and the company was officially organized on February 17 of that year.

The part played by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the national life is well known to all Canadians. The strength and faith of the company, the vision of its first president, and Lord Strathcona, the driving energy and ability of Sir William Van Horne, the second president, the genius of Lord Shaughnessy, the third president, and the wise guidance of Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., K.C., LL.D., the present chairman of the company, through the world's most troubled times are part and parcel of Canadian history. The company's part in the present struggle is in keeping with its spirit of service and good citizenship.

EPIC OF COURAGE

The building of the railway line through the unsettled wilderness, with separated eastern Canada and the Pacific coast was an epic of courage, industry and resourcefulness. Construction workers had to overcome almost insurmountable obstacles on the North Shore of Lake Superior and in the Canadian Rockies while the railway management in Montreal was faced by an even more formidable succession of serious financial crises and bitter political and business opposition. Time and again disaster threatened the whole project and every cent of the investors' money and the company founders' personal fortunes seemed in danger of being lost. It was not until the spring of 1883, when rapid transportation of soldiers to subdue the recent Red rebellion proved the military value of the railway that opposition in Canada and England collapsed and full-hearted last-minute support was provided to enable the line to be completed on November 7, 1885.

When, within a year of the completion of the line, the company was able to secure financing to repay every cent of its indebtedness, its own credit abroad and that of the Dominion too was firmly established on the sound footing it has since maintained.

NEW INTEREST

Great Britain, in particular, developed an intense new interest in and change of attitude toward Canada. The company's record of service since 1881 is best expressed by figures showing its growth, its present efficiency and capacity and the scope of its activities. Its own transportation facilities include steamship and rail routes spanning a continent and two oceans, linking Europe with Australia and the Orient. There were 16 passenger and freight ships on the Atlantic and four on the Pacific at the outbreak of the war, but most of them are now operating under charter from the Admiralty. Other company ships include 23 in coastal service, five on the Great Lakes and eight on the lakes of British Columbia.

The company has 17,100 miles of rail lines in Canada, owns 1,767 locomotives, nearly 3,000 passenger cars and 73,000 freight cars of all kinds, 14 hotels with a total of 5,254 rooms as well as numerous lodges and has varied services which touch every branch of national life. In a normal year it carries 120,000 passengers across the Atlantic, last year carried nearly 8,000,000 passengers more than 90,000,000 passenger miles on the rail lines and 17,000,000 tons of freight representing more than 16,000,000 tons of mail, and operated 370,000 circuit miles of telegraph line.

STATEMENT ON WHEAT POLICY EXPECTED SOON

By R. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—A comprehensive statement on 1941 wheat policy is expected from the government in the early days of the continued session starting next Monday. Hon. J. A. Mackinnon, minister of trade and commerce, is understood to be preparing the case.

He will be able to announce, it is indicated, that 1940 obligations are almost discharged, and will be fulfilled entirely with transfer of last harvest of 1940 wheat off the farms. Delivery of all 1940 wheat is now being provided through additional terminal storage at the lakehead. For 1941, the board officials of policy have already been given. Compulsory reduction of acreage is unlikely to find favor, but the farmer is likely to be confined to not down on wheat and he may be told exactly how much wheat he can count on selling to the wheat board. The government is not likely to undertake to buy the entire 1941 crop as it did in 1940, but may establish a quota on the basis of 1940 deliveries.

A total of 4,400,000 cubic yards of concrete will be used in the construction of Boulder Dam.

Authority Is Extended For JOINT APPEAL

Six Organizations To Hold
Campaign For Funds
In March

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—(CP)—Authority has been granted to six organizations to make a joint appeal starting March 24 for funds to carry on their auxiliary services for the armed forces and normal home services. The appeal will be presented at a meeting of the provincial command today.

Mr. Gardiner said he had approved budgets totalling $1,174,185 for five of the organizations. He was approving inclusion in the campaign of the Imperial Order of the Sons of the Empire, which wanted to raise $100,000. A formal I.O.S.E. campaign budget would be approved.

BUDGETS APPROVED
The budgets approved so far are: Canadian Legion, $100,000; Salvation Army, $100,000; V.A.C.A., $141,000; N.Y.C.A., $25,000.

Ordinarily, Mr. Gardiner said, the organizations put on separate campaigns for funds, but this time had pooled their efforts into one united campaign. The budgets for the campaign were "considered" by the National War Charities Fund Advisory Board.

The board, under the chairmanship of C. L. Burton, Toronto, scrutinized the budgets submitted by the organizations and in consultation with the representatives of the organizations concerned, effected substantial economies," the minister's statement said.

NO CURTAILMENT
Mr. Gardiner said the advisory board believed the economies effected would not curtail essential services to men of Canada's military forces anywhere.

Veterans Would Ban Export Of Many Materials

LADYSMITH, B.C., Feb. 15.—(CP)—Almeron Ernest Jamson, of Ladysmith, vice-president of the provincial command of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, left for Vancouver Friday where he will present a resolution to the provincial command urging the provincial and federal governments to "Ban the export of goods used in the manufacture of war materials to the Axis powers."

The resolution was endorsed by the Ladysmith branch of the Army and Navy Veterans and will be presented at a meeting of the provincial command today.

Japanese Abroad Are Advised Not To Be Disturbed

TOKYO, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Japanese residents in North and South America were advised today by the cabinet information bureau not to be disturbed by "irresponsible and sensational reports" of increasing tension between Japan and the United States.

"It is true that the situation between Japan and the United States gives cause for some concern," the statement said, "but it is unwarrantable to jump at a hasty conclusion that the situation will be overtaken by any such eventually as war."

"Even in our country, and without cultivating pessimism, we have seen to fear that this after-war period may be avoided, at least lessened, if we practiced here at the present time the 'virtue of economy' under the inspiration of Christian faith," Rodrique Cardinal Villeneuve said Friday in a statement urging the people to contribute to the dominion war savings campaign.

"Among the anxiety which the international situation inspires there are in particular, no matter what the outcome of the battle, the economic after-effects of the war," said the Cardinal, who is archbishop of Quebec.

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

THIS is a period of comparative quiet in musical circles. After a busy season, with many concerts ended close to Christmas, and a brief lull in the early part of January, events came upon one another. Now there is a lull again. But it is the time before the storm—before another round of activity. The rest of February will be very busy. The Edmonton Music Festival, which opened last night at the Municipal Club Feb. 12, is a free affair, with no charge for admission. It is a concert given by the Edmonton Music Festival Association, which is a non-profit organization. The concert was given by the Edmonton Music Festival Association, which is a non-profit organization. The concert was given by the Edmonton Music Festival Association, which is a non-profit organization.

JOHN OLIVER has a lion, most interestingly speaking. There is the Empire Opera Company's performance of John's story, "The Bat," the fifth and final of the series concert, a story by Michael Simon, world famous violinist, the production by the Edmonton Civic Opera Society. Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta,"

The Edmonton branch of the Alberta Music Teachers' Association held its regular meeting at the Corona hotel last night, with Vernon W. Barford, president, in the chair. The officers of the association are: President, Vernon W. Barford; Vice-President, J. H. Smith; Secretary, J. H. Smith; Treasurer, J. H. Smith. The meeting was held at the Corona hotel last night, with Vernon W. Barford, president, in the chair. The officers of the association are: President, Vernon W. Barford; Vice-President, J. H. Smith; Secretary, J. H. Smith; Treasurer, J. H. Smith.

Among subjects discussed were a list of ethics given to members of the association, and a list of requirements as outlined in the syllabus for high school students requiring music credits. It was decided to table the matter of registration for music teachers in Alberta for one year, and the next session, fund-raising was tabled for some future occasion. Arrangements were completed for the Thursday meeting for general free music tuition to several of the war girls in the children from Britain.

Many Edmontonians and music lovers throughout Alberta will remember Sir John Goss, tall and bearded, the conductor of the famous Orpheus choir of Glasgow and arranger of many old Scottish melodies as part songs. Sir John was an ardent supporter of the music festivals here. He proved popular with all. Even the unsuccessful criticism in comparison received a kindly word from him—providing their performances were not too far from the best. He was a distinguished and desired standard.

Recently, Sir Hugh and his Orpheus choir were invited to broadcast over the B.C. an experience enjoyed on previous occasions. But, before the broadcast, the B.C. circulated the following statement of policy: "The B.C. does not, in time of war, invite to the microphone anyone opposed to the national war effort. As Sir Hugh Robertson has realized the view he has put forward, the B.C. could not do so. It would otherwise have done invite him to appear at the microphone with the Orpheus choir." The statement of policy speaks only too plainly, and at a time when musicians generally are making such a splendid contribution to the war effort the attitude that made such a statement necessary, is to be deplored.

As the British Army of the Nile drives forward in several directions and on various fronts, Italy fights in the north—especially for the Italian Republic. There may be one prominent Italian musician who does mind the reverse being suffered by the blustering Duce. Arturo Toscanini, admittedly the foremost conductor of this generation, and some of the Italian officials have not been on cordial terms for some time—in fact they more or less severed diplomatic relations on June night nine years ago in Bologna when the fiery Toscanini refused to play the Fascist hymn, "Giovinezza." The breach of good relations has received its coup de grace. Toscanini's name has been expunged from the Italian War Music. The conductor's previous refusal of the three previous editions of the work published between 1938 and 1939, had not been selected, but Mrs. James H. Carmichael, general musical director, has cancelled the roster. In addition to those previously named, Keith Ridgway, conductor of the Philharmonia, and the late Sir Thomas Beecham, who died in 1939, will be T. J. Davis and L. H. Turner will be Sir Harry Blake.

Last week most of the cast for the Edmonton Civic Opera Society's production of Victor Herbert's melodious opera, "Naughty Marietta," was announced. A few of the players of minor roles had not been selected, but Mrs. James H. Carmichael, general musical director, has cancelled the roster. In addition to those previously named, Keith Ridgway, conductor of the Philharmonia, and the late Sir Thomas Beecham, who died in 1939, will be T. J. Davis and L. H. Turner will be Sir Harry Blake.

BY KATHERINE MACY

CHAPTER ONE

JAN MACLEOD stopped her horse at the foot of the hill and waited to see what sort of car was raising such a cloud of dust as it clattered over the little bridge in the quiet October dusk. It must have come from outside the shadow of the Blue Ridge. No one had hurried up here since the 'sixties, when the remnants of a Gray army had come that way, returning from Gettysburg. Now, even the little town by the bridge was dust-covered and almost deserted. The water wheel by the mill was overgrown with vines reddened by an early frost. A clear, cold stream from the mountains mandered over the rocks to the left, bordered with willows. Bittersweet glowed on the hillside. Jan had been riding for an hour and hadn't met a soul on the grassy road until now. Perhaps there were some antique-hunters, coming to the back country to look for treasures, cheap; or tourists strayed from the main road to Point of Rocks, across the Potomac on the Maryland side.

Yes . . . the car had a New York license. It was a small roadster, top down, very dusty. The driver was a tall young man in what Jan thought of as city clothes: gray flannel, carmine gray hair.

Most men down here were overalls, riding clothes, or tweeds, according to their inclination or their business.

The driver, Jan noted with another brief glance, was fairly immaculate. The man beside him was frankly tired, wind-blown, and as dusty as the car.

SANDY HAIR
His round face was shining red and his sandy hair stood on end. He stepped beside Jan. The driver called, "Is this the way to Holmwood?"

She looked there over. "Not a direct route. Did you miss the main road?"

"If we did," said the young man, tugging off his hat and running his fingers through his hair, "I haven't the faintest desire to go back to it. Doesn't this road go anywhere?"

She laughed. "Eventually, Jan, as far as Holmwood. It's passable."

"Not if it gets any worse!" The other man shifted a large camera from his lap to the seat between them and groaned. "Look here, Steve, why don't you ask her right out. Maybe she knows something about this whole case."

STEVE HEMMINGS
"Well . . ." Steve hesitated. "All right. Would you happen to know," he asked Jan, "if Peter Cavallus Van Vliet III is at his ancestral mansion, Holmwood?"

Jan froze. Her hand pulled the rein nervously, and the horse jumped. Jan glanced at her, then said, "If you're looking for him, you might as well go back to New York. He's not at Holmwood."

She wheeled the horse around and started up the path alongside the stream. "Hey, was a minute!" called the youngster. "Steve, don't let her get away! Maybe she knows something."

"Don't know what you can do about it," she said, "said Steve solemnly. "There she goes."

Fifteen minutes later Jan pulled up to the Holmwood stables. Her smooth blond hair was ruffled and she was breathing hard as she jumped off and gave the reins to a colored groom who was lounging outside. "Take care of her, will you, Freeman?" she said hurriedly. "I'll be back in half an hour." He hung up slowly. Her father asked eagerly, "What did he say? Where is Peter?"

"Don't worry," she said, pushing him back down on the couch gently. "He'll turn up. Always does."

HANDS UP
"Come here, young lady!" said Bob Macleod sternly. "Now, what did Robert Van Vliet say?"

She laughed, then sat down beside him and told him, "That's the story. I'm Mrs. Van Vliet bringing her guests up here tomorrow?"

"As far as I know," Jan said, "they are being very rude. He said they were being very rude."

WHY WORRY?
So why should she worry because he had disappeared as he had often done before? It didn't concern her. But . . . kidnapped?

CHAPTER TWO
Visions from the other room brought Jan from the kitchen. Her father was standing at the outer door, a new man was saying, "Then he's not here." The driver of the new car?

Before she could get to the door, he had gone on. "I am Stephen Gardner of the New York Globe, and this is Henry Howard, one of our photographers. Do you suppose we might go up to the . . . er . . . mansion and look for Mr. Van Vliet?"

He looked past Bob Macleod and met Jan's eye. He brown eyes widened. "That won't be necessary," she said.

STANDS UP
"Oh, Peter?" she dismissed him with a wave of her hand. "Mrs. Tuttle gave you your dinner, didn't she? He's going to find something for myself."

She shut the door of the kitchen behind her and leaned against it in sudden weakness, her mind in a tumult.

Peter again. And she couldn't dismiss him with a wave of her hand. Just the sound of his name was enough to awaken her emotions as it always had.

OLD STORY
It was such an old story. She had known him since she was five and Peter was six, when his father had bought Holmwood. Jan had fought him to ride, her pigtail flying in the wind, while Peter tried to keep up with her.

They swam together in the pool his father built, romped the woods together, got under Bob's feet, and were properly punished for it.

After his parents were divorced when he was in his early teens he came to Holmwood, less often. His father remarried, and Peter with his stepmother brought to the Virginia estate several times a year. He went to Paris with his mother, or to Newport for sailing, or to a western ranch.

Well, Jan had learned to do without him. She was twenty, her best years were her father's. Peter was at Harvard, the more of his triumphant culmination of a life of preparation, schools and tutors.

She must know now, Jan thought fiercely, that he was only an impossible, childish obsession. Yet he was in her mind, always. In moments of complete self-forgetfulness she knew that she spent her days waiting for the next time he should come to Holmwood. Peter Cavallus Van Vliet III, Park Avenue, Newport, Palm Beach, Paris, and wherever else he liked. And wherever else he liked, Jan Macleod, of Peterford, Virginia. They didn't match.

WHY WORRY?
So why should she worry because he had disappeared as he had often done before? It didn't concern her. But . . . kidnapped?

Peter again. And she couldn't dismiss him with a wave of her hand. Just the sound of his name was enough to awaken her emotions as it always had.

OLD STORY
It was such an old story. She had known him since she was five and Peter was six, when his father had bought Holmwood. Jan had fought him to ride, her pigtail flying in the wind, while Peter tried to keep up with her.

They swam together in the pool his father built, romped the woods together, got under Bob's feet, and were properly punished for it.

After his parents were divorced when he was in his early teens he came to Holmwood, less often. His father remarried, and Peter with his stepmother brought to the Virginia estate several times a year. He went to Paris with his mother, or to Newport for sailing, or to a western ranch.

Well, Jan had learned to do without him. She was twenty, her best years were her father's. Peter was at Harvard, the more of his triumphant culmination of a life of preparation, schools and tutors.

She must know now, Jan thought fiercely, that he was only an impossible, childish obsession. Yet he was in her mind, always. In moments of complete self-forgetfulness she knew that she spent her days waiting for the next time he should come to Holmwood. Peter Cavallus Van Vliet III, Park Avenue, Newport, Palm Beach, Paris, and wherever else he liked. And wherever else he liked, Jan Macleod, of Peterford, Virginia. They didn't match.

WHY WORRY?
So why should she worry because he had disappeared as he had often done before? It didn't concern her. But . . . kidnapped?

CHAPTER TWO
Visions from the other room brought Jan from the kitchen. Her father was standing at the outer door, a new man was saying, "Then he's not here." The driver of the new car?

Before she could get to the door, he had gone on. "I am Stephen Gardner of the New York Globe, and this is Henry Howard, one of our photographers. Do you suppose we might go up to the . . . er . . . mansion and look for Mr. Van Vliet?"

He looked past Bob Macleod and met Jan's eye. He brown eyes widened. "That won't be necessary," she said.

STANDS UP
"Oh, Peter?" she dismissed him with a wave of her hand. "Mrs. Tuttle gave you your dinner, didn't she? He's going to find something for myself."

She shut the door of the kitchen behind her and leaned against it in sudden weakness, her mind in a tumult.

Peter again. And she couldn't dismiss him with a wave of her hand. Just the sound of his name was enough to awaken her emotions as it always had.

MUMMY, WHAT CAN WE DO TO HELP WIN THE WAR?

THIS is a peaceful scene, isn't it? To keep it peaceful, men and women are giving their lives in the far corners of the earth. Airmen of surpassing courage are setting off in the darkness of night to keep the lights burning. Sailors are holding the sea for the Empire. Soldiers are carrying the war to the enemy and defending the heroic Isles. Civilians are suffering the terror at its worst.

Listen, Canadian mother. Listen, Canadian dad. Everything is quiet on your street this morning. More than anything in the world you want this picture to remain like this, for her and for her children and for her children's children.

The answer to her question is so simple, even she can help. But it's so necessary that everyone must act. The answer is lend . . . lend . . . lend. Canada asks only the use of your money to equip the men, to pour out the munitions, to build the ships, to hurry out the planes . . . to guard your home. Today is the day to start buying War Savings Certificates.
